

If self-important people want to talk so badly on their cell telephones, make them sit in first class. Most economy-class travelers don't want to be subjected to listening to the petty details of the business and personal lives of strangers. This proposal is akin to purchasing a ticket for the cinema and having to sit through advertisements before the feature begins.

Keep the heavens a (cell telephone-free) haven!